Redistricting fails; 2 elections planned

BY JANET MCQUEEN

The September 17 primary election will proceed on schedule, but voters will find themselves at the polls again next year when new district lines are drawn.

A three-judge panel ordered the House and Senate race winners may serve until 1992, when a new election will be held to provide more black-majority districts.

Legislative districts are redrawn every 10 years to reflect shifts in population determined by the U. S. Census. The new district plan submitted by the Legislature in April was rejected by the U. S. Department of Justice for being racially discriminatory.

Blacks currently occupy two seats in the 52-member Senate and 20 seats in the 122-member House, although 35 percent of the state's population are black.

The judges, Fifth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Rhesa Barksdale, and U. S. District Court Judges Tom Lee and Charles Pickering, declared there was insufficient time for the court to draw new districts without delaying the Sept. 17 primaries.

"I am extremely disappointed in Friday's action by the court," said Rep. J. P. Compretta. "The three-judge panel has adequate time and resources to reach a decision on a redistricting plan."

"It is unfair to the citizens of our state to have to incur the additional expenses for an election next year."

Sen. Margaret (Wootsie) Tate, who presently represents the Crane Creek and Leetown communities in Hancock County, said "No one is happy. We will have a lame duck legislature and it is a crying shame."

Tate, whose district also includes south Pearl River County, parts of Harrison and Stone counties, will now represent 65,000 people with the population increase in those areas, as opposed to the 49,100 she was elected to serve.

Home sweet home

Four soldiers and friends speak of their Desert Storm memories

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Four of this county's heroes gathered Friday at the home of Troy Haynes in Bay St. Louis in order to share some of their experiences during their last eight months of active duty in the Persian Gulf War.

When the Bay St. Louis 1355th National Guard Unit left in the dead of night last November, it was a heartrending experience for the families and friends left behind.

The sound of a child sobbing in rasps of breaths for her daddy could be heard throughout the silent armory building after the busses left.

What those men and women felt in their hearts and thought in their minds as they rolled through the darkness towards Ocean Springs, one can only imagine.

"It was our duty," the four men joined in saying.

Albert Ashworth of Bay St. Louis, Glenn Fountain of Waveland and Enick Bell of Waveland explained, "If someone was to invade Bay St. Louis, we would need help—from the state, from the country. Those people (Kuwaitis) had no one to help them. They needed our help."

"That's right," interjected the other men.

Ashworth said the general feeling throughout the ranks of the military was that the Allied Forces should have continued into Baghdad. "That man (Saddam Hussein) is going to be a threat as long as he lives."

THE MISSION

The men told of how they practiced fueling techniques while they were in Fort Rucker, Ala.

These four were part of a petroleum-oil-lubrication (POL) brigade. Their mission was to supply fuel for all transport vehicles.

Though the men practiced their POL techniques at Camp Shelby in Hattiesburg once a year, the magnitude of the job during actual war conditions gave each of them a new challenge.

Gambling proponents, opponents find common ground in workshop

BY TRACI BONNEY

Two presentations, 10 questions and three hours after it started, a gambling study workshop Thursday showed one thing:

Many people in Bay St. Louis, no matter what their personal convictions are about dockside gambling, share the same concerns about community preservation and protection.

About 140 people met Thursday night at the county Civic Center with Bay St. Louis gambling feasibility study consultants Paul Buckhurst and Hawkins Stern. Half of those present were participants, while the other half observed from the audience.

The participants sat at seven tables and jotted their discussion notes on large pads mounted on easels. Bay St. Louis zoning project manager Jules Lagarde explained that Buckhurst and Stern would incorporate those notes, along with other information from the workshop, into their study findings.

The other information consisted of audience responses to the same 10 questions the seven groups discussed.

IMPRESSIONS OF BAY ST. LOUIS

Before turning the meeting over to group discussion, Buckhurst and Stern gave two slide presentations. In his presentation, Buckhurst showed several maps of Bay St. Louis, with different areas highlighted for various purposes.

He said that after looking at the maps and touring the area, especially the beachfront, his impression of the city is one of water and a village-like atmosphere. "It's clearly a low-rise, low-scale, human-scale city."

He identified several possible sites for dockside gambling operations, and emphasized that these are not recommended sites, but only potential ones.

Those sites include the foot of the Bay bridge, the beachfront at the end of Main Street, the area next to the railroad bridge and the American Legion pier within the city limits; and Bay Cove Harbour, the possible LA Cruise site at Cedar Point, Bayou Cadet and the Diamondhead Yacht Club outside the Bay St. Louis limits.

Assault charges dropped after hours of waiting

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Bay St. Louis Civil Court was held at bay for more than two hours Wednesday while Joe Ethridge, George Welman and Norma Marrs held pre-trial discussions in private.

Welman and Marrs each charged Ethridge with a count of simple assault, claiming that during a June 7 meeting, Ethridge physically pushed them outside of the Bay St. Louis City Council chambers.

City Judge George H. Lipscomb Jr. lifted his robes and sat with the 20-odd persons in the

Vegas gets a touch of Class

Local trio provides entertainment at costumers' convention

Heitzmann, Bezou, Wallace and friends

BY TRACI BONNEY

Second-lining at the Sahara and a chance to be a showgirl—what more could you ask for in a trip to Vegas?

Local music trio Class Distinction just returned from the gig of a lifetime—a 10-day trip to Las Vegas to provide the entertainment for the National Costumers' Association convention.

Lead singer Connie Heitzmann said, "I felt like I should have had a camera with me all the time. It was almost like they were entertaining us. All the parties had a theme, and the conventioners went everywhere in costume."

The trio, currently made up of Heitzmann, Pam Wallace on keyboards and John Bezou on guitar, played at poolside, in the showroom, at banquets and receptions. Connie called the convention the group's "Oasis in Unreality" tour.

"It really was unreal! Nothing could top it. We used all our costumes and some sundresses. We played just about everything in our repertoire. And just watching our audience with their costumes was great."

Pam agreed with Connie's opinion. "It was wonderful. You play music that you love to do, but yet the audience is such a joy to look at."

Both women mentioned two parties as the reasons for some of the convention's most creative and flamboyant costumes. One, a pool party, had a Gay '90s theme. The conventioners wore swimsuits appropriate to the era, complete with bathing caps.

The other, a "Winners and Losers" party, gave rise (not surprisingly) to a bevy of gambling-related ensembles. However, one departure from the "lost wages" flavor of the party was a convention-goer who dressed as Uncle Sam and carried an effigy of Saddam Hussein's head on a platter.

For Pam, introducing the Mardi Gras Mambo to the Sahara Hotel was a high point of the trip. Connie had created some umbrellas for the group to use during second-lining, and Pam, who grew up in New Orleans and whose father was in a band there, provided the beat rolling piano-style.

"It was contagious," Connie

Hunter education classes begin August 5

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

The Mississippi State Wildlife, Fisheries and Park Commission will offer free classes in hunter education beginning August 5.

Antoine Boyd will instruct the first of five classes to be offered to the public at the Mississippi Power Building on Highway 90 in Bay St. Louis.

This class is mandatory prior to license purchase for any person born on or after January 1, 1972.

Boyd reports that the avid hunter who wishes to travel to another state in pursuit of the sport, should check with that state's hunting requirements.

He added the Mississippi class is applicable throughout the United States and Canada.

The first class will be taught over four nights, August 5, 6, 10 and 12, from 6 to 9 p.m.

The class will offer instruction on hunting responsibilities, wildlife conservation, firearm handling, muzzle loading, archery and survival techniques.

Anyone 10 years old or younger must be accompanied by an adult.

The hunting education instruction class is a one time requirement.

Due to state financial cuts the classes will be limited in size. Pre-registration is a must. Call 467-6838 to reserve your seat.

Couple moves across United States in bike-mounted kinetic sculptures

BY TRACI BONNEY

Ever see a pile of rocks, a shoe and a barrel travel across country?

Well, you may have and not realized it.

Ken Beidleman and June Moxon of Ferndale, Calif., are traveling from their hometown to Kittyhawk, N.C., in hopes of setting a record for cross-country kinetic sculpture travel.

Their vehicle is constructed from bicycle parts, pontoons and other doohickies. The 2,140-pound contraption includes 32 bike tires, 36 gears, a pool vacuum cleaner tube that serves as a telephone line of sorts, a CB radio, lights, brakes, two brass sculptures, a portable kitchen and a dog.

Ken, 40, is the 1987 world champion for kinetics racing, and June, 39, is the 1989 world champion. They competed in a three-day, 38-mile all terrain kinetics race in Ferndale for several years before attempting this trip.

They hit the road on June 18, 1989, and have been pedaling about 20 miles a day across the U.S. for the past two years. They are calling their 4,600-mile trek Kinetic Sculptures Across America.

They stop occasionally to work so they can buy groceries and other supplies, and sleep at campgrounds or wherever they can. Ken is a sign painter, and June has worked in shoe stores as everything from a clerk to manager.

That probably explains why her part of the kinetic sculpture resembles a white alligator skin high-heeled shoe. June's part of the vehicle provides much of the motion.

"I have to push him," she said, laughing and pointing at Ken.

Ken, seated inside the papier

Ken, June, Scratch and their kinetic sculpture mache pile of rocks at the front of the vehicle, is the pilot. He steers, handles the lights at night, and honks the horn hidden inside a moveable brass sculpture that resembles a metal Muppet head.

The third section of the kinetic sculpture is a papier mache barrel, which houses some of the couple's supplies and their dog, Scratchin'-itchen'-lickin'-bitin'-snortin'-black-and-white-cowdog, or Scratch for short.

June explained the dog adopted them while she was taking care of a lady's ranch out West. "When we left, the dog came with us. The lady didn't mind. It was obvious I wasn't getting rid of the dog."

Scratch will try to bite anyone who approaches, but the dog has no front teeth. So at worst, you'll get gummed and slobbered on.

The back of the kinetic sculpture houses the couple's portable kitchen. "Ken's a good cook," June said. "He cooks and I clean. And since he's a sparring cook, I don't have much to clean."

In addition to piloting the moving sculpture, Ken operates the CB. He enjoys recording conversations between the truckers that pass them on the road.

"I have taped about 45 minutes of trucker drivers saying, 'What the hell was that?'" he chuckled.

Other experiences include sharing a birthday on the road (they are exactly a year apart), complete with a cake brought to them by some people they had met a week earlier, almost losing their vehicle when a tornado passed over a KOA campground where they were staying, being interviewed by reporters from the National Enquirer who followed them to the National parking lot in Waveland just to get the story; and water testing their vehicle on one of the most treacherous bays in California, Humboldt Bay.

Yes, the thing floats. It is designed to be all-terrain (for such things as traversing the Rockies) and amphibious. It moves on water by means of pontoons and paddlewheels.

Ken and June said they aren't out to make any environmental statements, just to prove they can complete the trip. They plan to write a book and make a video from their trip.

"What are we out for?" June said. "A lot of glory."

"Yeah, a lot of glory," Ken echoed.

No funds for second attendance officer

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

Youth Court Judge Michael Haas reported he has received word from the state, "No money to hire an additional attendance officer for the county."

House Bill No. 30, which took effect July 1, 1991, states the "state shall provide funding for one school attendance officer employed by the youth court or family court judge for each 2,000...of compulsory school-age children."

Hancock County has approximately 3,700 students and one attendance officer, Yvonne Landry.

Bay St. Louis Police Chief Frank McNeil was an attendance officer for the county along with Landry until his resignation from the position in the beginning of the year.

The 1990-91 school year was completed with only Landry to cover both the county and Bay-Waveland districts.

Haas said he wrote two letters "demanding" the state hire another attendance officer before the beginning of the school year.

His reply from the state gave two reasons for the delay: one, no money, and two, the position is subject to the state freeze on spending.

State Senator Vic Franckiewicz, commenting on funding possibilities during the new session, said he doubts the state will be able to do anything other than "contain what we have now, without any substantial tax reforms."

Frankiewicz added, should the November elections be held under new district boundary lines, the legislators might tackle funding appropriations for such needs as school attendance officers.

But, should the elections be held under the present district boundaries, "It will be a do-nothing session, since they will have to run for election again in a year" after redistricting goes into effect.

Several folks have commented about how they hate to see Northwest Airlines pulling out of the Gulfport-Biloxi Regional Airport.

The announcement by Northwest this past week caught many folks by surprise.

The use of the airline in Gulfport has been increasing, and it is such a convenience for residents in Hancock County when they can fly out of that facility.

Gulfport is much more convenient than having to go through the hustle and bustle of New Orleans International Airport. One of the problems with that airport, located in Kenner, is that one never knows how long the drive from Hancock County will take.

I am glad efforts are underway to "Save the Jets" in Gulfport, and I am hoping it will be successful.

Reports I have received indicate the folks from Fort Buckner's Motor Pool reported that the Welcome Home for the 1355th in Hancock County was the largest welcome they had seen in 31 times they had brought troops home.

I want to personally thank each and everyone who participated in the Welcome Home. I know it was a long, hot wait, but our men and women had been in a much hotter place for some long month than we have in Hancock County.

It was so good last Saturday to see the big smiles on the faces of the Guardsmen as they rode through the streets of Bay St. Louis.

The displays of flags and ribbons as well as the patriotic crowds along the route through town will always remain with those who were welcomed home for a job well done.

I would like to say a special Thank You to each and every member of the 1355th. You all deserve all the praises you receive.

I am hoping every member will be at the big celebration planned especially for you next Saturday by the veterans organizations and others to be held at the Waveland Legion Home on Coleman Avenue.

A parade is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. at the intersection of Waveland and Central Avenues. It will proceed down Central to Coleman and then to the Legion home.

We need a lot of folks to line the parade route once again, and I hope to see you there.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

U.S. Senate panel funds state projects

Senator Thad Cochran said the bill to fund the Department of Agriculture next year provided more than $1 billion for programs and projects in Mississippi.

The $53.12 billion FY 1992 appropriations bill includes a wide range of programs, such as crop supports, soil and water conservation, export enhancement, rural development, nutrition assistance and agriculture research.

The allocations to the State of Mississippi will have a great impact on our agriculture economy, and the research programs at our colleges and universities," said Cochran. The Appropriations Committee approved the bill, he said.

Cochran, ranking member of the committee on Agriculture, noted that the bill funds a number of special programs and projects in Mississippi. $5.2 million is provided for construction of the Natural Products Center at the University of Mississippi; several million dollars are provided for agricultural research programs at Mississippi State University, the University of Southern Mississippi, and Alcorn and Mississippi Valley State Universities.

Research programs at USDA facilities in Mississippi are funded in the bill as well. Included in this group are the National Sedimentation Lab in Oxford, the Pesticide Residue Laboratory in Gulfport and the Aquaculture Research Center at Stoneville.

Cochran noted that $3.5 million is provided in the Soil Conservation Service for watershed and flood prevention operations in Mississippi. Those funds will repair some damage from the flooding we had in 1990 and 1991, Cochran said.

The bill must now be considered by the full Senate.

OIL JUNKIES?

Face it.

We are a nation of fossil-fuel junkies. And we are pushing this energy narcotic on our children.

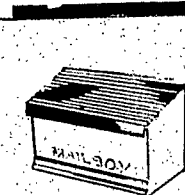

Unless we break our oil habit, we doom the next generation to a lifetime of fossil-fuel dependency. The symptoms are easy to spot. An insatiable craving for gasoline. An obsession with maintaining unstable oil supplies at any cost.

But we can break this addiction without painful withdrawal. By driving less. Demanding more fuel-efficient cars. Investing in energy technologies that fuel our economy but keep the environment clean.

It's the only way to keep today's children from becoming tomorrow's oil junkies.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Weidman should be thanked, not lambasted

To the Editor:

When Mayor Stella Frilot was an alderman, she frequently questioned the policies and practices of Mayor John Longo, the same as Stan Weidman is now questioning her.

The voters of Waveland must have been in agreement with her actions, because they gave her the former mayor's job.

Why then, when there is disagreement between Stan Weidman and the mayor and other aldermen, do some people feel Weidman has an ulterior motive in doing what he believes to be in the best interest of the people he represents?

In my opinions, Stan Weidman should be thanked, not lambasted, for his sincere efforts on behalf of this constituents.

La. tournament yields double trouble

The place was Baker, Well chosen it seems For a tournament bought By the Louisiana team. With practice and skill As the name of our game; Excitement and courage—Our hearts felt the same. Ready to play and to score And try real hard to win, We took our positions Out on the field again. With Patches on the mound, Rheannon, in left field; Angela ready down at third—The crowd awaited a yield. A throw to second and first

And then a tag at home By a tough little catcher Named Rocky Fontenot. The Arkansas team played good ball, But our girls fought and won; Inning six brought victory As one should assume; And made 'em proud back home.

The next game we played Was surprising to all; Our spirits were dampened By 5 hits with the ball. No, not from our batters As one should assume; They came from the pitcher. With a careless "windmill zoom."

The game continued on Though I protested twice; The umpire, he did listen And sought some more advice.

My plea was just ignored And number 14 threw again; Christie got it on the wrist And Kate below the shin. Our team fell in defeat To the Louisiana gang; Two players really felt the hurt

And I, too, felt the pangs. Afterwards, I spoke my mind And Bilbo said it, too—"Your pitcher, coach, needs some control."

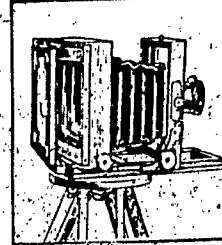

And we made no big ado! Must have said the wrong darn thing "Cause she got very rude; "Bullshit, poor sport," was her reply.

And things got heavy, dude! It gets confusing at this point So listen up, Bay fans, That district guy, the head umpire—

He was this gal's old man! The pitcher with the windmill zoom?

Want to know who taught her? I guess then we should ask the coach—

Since "14" was her daughter! Sandra Gray Manager Bay St. Louis All-Stars Bay St. Louis man equipment," Ashworth commented. "We had to do helicopter refueling, which we had never done before."

"Not everything was the same," Haynes stated. "We had this knowledge, but for the first time we had to put it to use."

The primary job of POL, as explained by the four, is to fill tankers from supply areas and bring them to the outlying areas camps where the fuel is placed in a bladder (fiber tank), or "water bed", as Bell called it. These bladders hold anywhere from 50,000 to 200,000 gallons of fuel.

The POL would then run two or three long lines of hoses. From each line, a dozen or so separate lines would run off to the side, allowing the vehicles individual self-service pumps. These facilities would be moved as needed along with

Fountain added, "When I first saw one, I looked up and there was an orange ball of fire shooting through the air."

"It wasn't very far away," Then the Patriots (missiles) were shot off, and boom, before the debris could fall, I had my gas mask on."

All of the men admitted to having been afraid. During the Scud attacks the men had been stationed closer to the Kuwait-Saudi border.

It was during the air war which began on January 17 until the ground war on February 24 that the men of the 1355th had to live with the constant threat of Scud attacks.

Once the ground war began, the Scud attacks stopped, they reported.

UNIT IS SPLIT

Ashworth was sent further north for a short period of time, Bell stated, which broke up ed their impressions of the community turnout in Bay St. Louis and Waveland saying:

—Haynes, "When I saw that bridge, I knew we were home. But all those people, I didn't expect that."

Standing, Troy Haynes, Enick Bell and Glenn Fountain; kneeling, Albert Ashworth.

—Ashworth, "I was shocked." —Bell, "I thought it would be a little bitty thing."

—Fountain, "When I saw that flag and everybody in the bus yelling, 'Look at that flag.' What a greeting!"

—Bell, "I thought we just got out of prison."

—Ashworth, "We all missed our town, but we didn't know..."

CONCERN FOR COMMUNITY

The experience of the Persian Gulf War did not seem to leave many scars on our four heroes. But there was some changes they confessed in their outlook upon their own lives.

Though each expressed a desire to spend more quality time with their families, there was also a concern for the community, especially the children and teenagers.

The experience of the war not only gave each man a renewed sense of family, but they admitted to a value for time and concern for neighbor, which they said was absent prior to this experience.

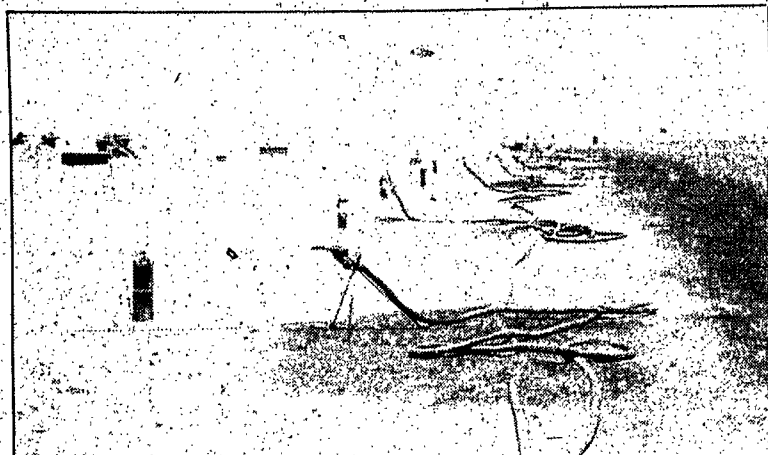

Ashworth and Haynes, in particular, plan to find out more about new fishing laws which have been imposed since their leaving.

They began to sound like young activists wanting to know what purpose it served to ticket a child for a crab under five inches.

All four of the men asked that their thanks be given to Congressman Gene Taylor.

Though Taylor chose to vote for continued sanctions, they claimed Taylor to be a active supporter throughout the ordeal.

Self-service pumps smaller set-ups (log bases) for closer to the line needs.

The men said though they never worked directly with soldiers from other countries, Egyptian forces came to refuel on a regular basis.

Explaining that after the Vietnam War, the Army and National Guard had a re-designation of duties, they said, the Army was made-up mostly of younger men who were physically better able to tolerate the rigorous demands of front line combat, while the National Guard supplied most of the support functions.

They added that though the Guard provided many combat soldiers, the army had no one to provide the functions of the 1355th and similar units.

Bell said, "We had to train regular Army to do our jobs." "That's why we were so long in coming back. There was no one there to take our place."

THE SIGHTS AND SOUNDS OF WAR

The reality of the war really hit home for the men when during the war the Iraqis began shooting off Scud missiles into the surrounding towns.

Bell described the horror saying, "You would hear boom-boom, boom-boom, and then people would be hollering and screaming."

"The air would be filled with the odor of human flesh. It stinks like nothing you have ever smelled."

"There was nothing you could do."

Ashworth commented, "When they hit that barracks with American soldiers in it, everything got real."

After a few seconds of silence, Bell said, "Yea, as soon as I heard one of them go off, I dived into the fox hole."

Rev. Mounger honored by Presbytery of Mississippi

Special to the Echo
The Presbytery of Mississippi has honored a Bay St. Louis clergyman for his 60 years as pastor, peacemaker and promoter of reform.

Meeting July 25 in Meridian, the state Presbyterian governing body surprised the Rev. Duyn Mounger, 85, with a framed resolution of appreciation.

From 1968 until 1973 Mounger was minister of First Presbyterian Church in Bay St. Louis. In retirement he became organizing pastor of Diamondhead Presbyterian Church. He has also served as interim minister of First Presbyterian, Natchez, and of Trinity Presbyterian, Laurel.

In the 1980s Mounger campaigned successfully for Hancock voters to replace the former "beat" system of county government with the present one.

At age 81 he founded the "World-wide Grass Roots Peace Crusade," accompanying the Belhaven College Choir to China in 1988. With them he sang on Tiananmen Square and traversed part of the Great Wall.

Mounger's peacemaking efforts began during his first pastorate in Forest, Miss. in the 1930s. When a black sharecropper killed in self-defense a drunken, armed white, no local lawyer would defend him. So Mounger, given covert instructions by an attorney friend, interviewed eyewitnesses. Then he sobered up a boozing, failed lawyer from out of town, who managed to save the accused from the electric chair.

As a pastor in Carthage, after World War II, he inspired an annual "Tri-Racial Goodwill Festival." Area whites, blacks and Choctaws gathered at a stadium. The Native Americans staged a stick-ball contest and sold handicrafts. African-American choirs sang spirituals, and the Caucasians furnished the speaker.

In Jackson, after the so-called "Mississippi Burning" summer of 1964, Mounger joined with Catholic, Jewish and Protestant religious leaders to form the state's first interracial, interfaith association of clergy. This "Committee of Concern" raised enough funds to rebuild the 38 black churches burned by secret terrorists.

From 1943 until 1946 Mounger was chaplain in the U.S. Army Air Corps. Prior to moving to Bay St. Louis, he served 15 years as general presbyter of the former Central Mississippi Presbytery.

Since 1972, in efforts to promote world peace, he has traveled once to the USSR and eastern Europe and three times to the Orient.

Mounger attended high school in his native Collins, Miss., and received his higher education at Millsaps College, Columbia Theological Seminary and New College of the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

After the death of Mounger's first wife, the former Bessie Ingram, in 1971, he married Christine Renshaw of Bay St. Louis. The couple lives on Highland Drive.

St. Thomas at Diamondhead hosts vacation Bible school

BY JANET MCQUEEN

"Jesus is Giving a Party, and We're All Invited."

St. Thomas Episcopal Church pastor the Reverend Barry Cotter hopes the invitation is one children will not be able to refuse.

The party in question is a week-long vacation Bible school, Monday, August 5 through August 9, for children ages 4-12 in the Diamondhead and Bay St. Louis areas.

"The idea we wish to emphasize, is, is the fact that every person is acceptable to God," said Cotter. "He has issued an invitation to abundant life, and each person as an individual is acceptable."

The theme is the focus of the National Episcopal Church curriculum, originated by the Diocese of Colorado. It is based on five parables of the gospel of Luke.

According to bible school director Marilyn Palmero, "We want to emphasize the positive to the children. Nothing you do is beyond being forgiven."

"The party is not just you and God," said Cotter. "It is you and all the people on Earth. Whether you are happy or sad, God approves of you."

The week will culminate with the celebration of the Eucharist on Friday. "The children will participate in the liturgy and in setting the altar. The older class will bake the communion bread," said Cotter.

Transportation will be provided for children from Bay St. Louis if necessary. There is no charge to attend, but a collection of food items for the Hancock County Food Pantry will be taken each day to assist the needy.

For additional information, call the church office at 255-9213 or 255-7812, "or just come Monday," invited the pastor.

The events will begin with a group prayer each morning at 9 a.m. and will end at noon.

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

Women cry foul - Part II

If the right to bear children and rear a family, coupled with commitment to one person and sexual companionship, is of such paramount importance to us humans, why are so many of us, by sheer force of population imbalance, denied the opportunity to fulfill our yearning for this right?

Since God has equipped women and men so exquisitely, endowing them with numerous sexual charms and powerful desires, why is there no provision for millions of women who outnumber men in the general population of the United States?

Whereas it is a distinct hardship, almost torture at times, for women and men to live for years without the opportunity to secure a lifelong companion, must not some adjustment be made in the ironclad laws against extramarital sex?

Worse still, if the deprivation of an opportunity to have a lifelong companion persists throughout one's lifetime, is it not at least then a condition where the present moral restrictions have become humanly unbearable?

Worded differently, since we have but one life to live, it is most unfair to be deprived forever of a chance to love and be loved in a permanent one-on-one relationship. Or, if the latter is impossible, is it too much to ask for sanction of the lesser experience of a shared relationship?

Until now, the teachings of various religious denominations have been almost identical, conforming closely with biblical texts such as Paul's admonition to the Corinthians: "Do not be deceived; neither fornicators nor idolators nor adulterers nor boy prostitutes nor practicing homosexuals nor thieves nor the greedy nor drunkards nor slanderers nor robbers will inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 6: 9-10).

Virtually all churches have taken the hard line for years, although surveys dating back over a decade ago showed that many of the clergy in even the largest mainline churches gave a much stricter teaching in the pulpit than in counseling.

Now, however, churches are openly discussing how to be faithful to church teachings while speaking to the changing needs and lifestyles of some of the members. The 2.9 million-member Presbyterian

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy
McGuire Caire

These truly are salad days, with the hot and muggy days of August finding us in search of something cool-looking and cool-tasting to put on the table, so as to tempt flagging appetites. It's almost an effort to lift a fork, isn't it?

Summer-jaded cooks—and diners—have only to look as far as the vegetable and fruit bins and counters at our area supermarkets to find tasty solutions at good prices.

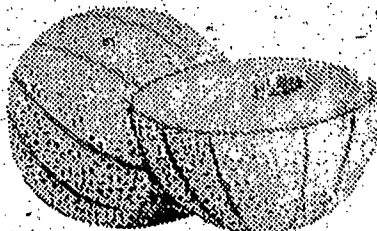

Iceberg lettuce is specially priced this week, but please don't limit your choices to this "green." You might be quite amazed at the difference in taste pleasures afforded by combinations of various lettuces and other salad greens! I like to mix a few or several together, dressing them according to my mood at the moment. For the most part, I prefer a good olive oil and vinegar dressing, at times adding chunks of Roquefort cheese; at other times, sprinkles of Romano cheese, adding anchovies, for example.

With tomatoes down in price and up in taste, and with avocados and onions and snap beans in good supply, there are delicious additions to the salad bowl. Just by adding strips of cooked chicken (chicken breasts are a special buy this week) or cooked beef strips (take your choice and save (beef roasts and steaks are offered at good prices) you've a main dish salad quite hearty enough to satisfy equally hearty appetites!

Fruit salads, summer's fresh fruit salads, are another boon to the heat-weary cook. The choice seems endless: melons of all sorts at good prices; peaches and nectarines and plums grapes and apples and pears and such, and that fruit we used to think of as unusual and exotic, the kiwi, which many of us now casually incorporate into our menus.

For a delicious dressing for a fresh fruit salad or a topping for a fresh fruit dessert, ever-so-cooling to the palate, try:

CANTELOUPE WITH LIME YOGURT

1 medium to large canteloupe
2 limes

1 tsp. lime zest
12-oz. vanilla yogurt

Seed the canteloupe, of course, and pare and cut into chunks; I like mine on the large side. Squeeze the limes until you have 1/4 cup of juice. Mix the yogurt and lime juice together, along with the zest. Divide the melon chunks among 4 dessert bowls and top with the lime yogurt.

Note: In grating the zest of the limes, be careful not to get any of the bitter white pith which lies under the skin. This lime yogurt is also quite tasty atop cut-up fruit of other sorts, or as a dressing for fresh fruit salad. Try it on kiwi or papaya!

Holston announces as candidate for Public Service Commission

Two-term state Rep. Curtis Holston of Poplarville has announced his candidacy for the Public Service Commission, Southern District.

Holston said, "I want to make the people of South Mississippi proud of their public service commissioner. I want them to know they have a direct line of communication. That's what I will accomplish if I am elected. After all, this office is, in the truest sense, a public trust that directly affects all consumers."

"While campaigning for the House of Representatives, I told the people how I would vote on certain issues, based on the input I received from them."

"I did just that. I'm proud of my record, and I want to provide the voters with reality, not just political rhetoric."

As a state lawmaker, Holston handled the appropriations for the Public Service Commission, which pumped $4 million back into the state's general operating fund. He sponsored legislation prohibiting special interest groups, such as the PSC-regulated utilities, from contributing to the campaign of any candidate vying for the Public Service Commission, the very agency that determines and regulates the rates consumers pay.

"I would like to see a toll-free telephone number into the PSC office and have regular hours in previously announced locations, enabling the people to ask questions, register complaints and have a voice in the duties of the Public Service Commissioner," Holston said.

Holston, 52, has served as

vice chairman of the House Agriculture Committee; as a member of the House Appropriations, the Health and Welfare, and the Oil, Gas and Other Minerals committees. A lifelong resident of Poplarville, he is a graduate of Poplarville High School and McNeese State University. He and his wife, the former Virginia "Ginger" Greer, have three children and four grandchildren.

He has been self-employed as a farmer and businessman for more than 30 years and is a member of the Poplarville Rotary Club, Poplarville PTA, First Baptist Church of Poplarville where he serves as a deacon, and Ducks Unlimited. He was honored by the educational group, the Mississippi Association for the Talented and Gifted, and given the Mississippi Realtors Award for "meritorious service in defense of and preservation of private property rights."

Holston plans to travel throughout the 27-county area served by the Southern District of the Public Service Commission, to gain input from the public about their needs and concerns.

Reflections Continued from Page 6A

Church—USA is the latest to go public on such radical internal upheavals.

Their focus has not been so much the overwhelming female population count as simply the choice of many individuals to live as partners outside marriage. By extension, that focus also falls on the world of homosexual love.

Instead of accepting a task force's endorsement of responsible extramarital sexual relationships between adults, the Presbyterian General Assembly, overwhelmingly reaffirmed the church's belief in the sanctity of marriage and a 12-year-old prohibition on ordaining homosexuals.

There has never been any doubt about the official teaching of the Catholic Church on all these questions, for that teaching is even firmer than the above-mentioned.

The only doubt has been concerning the ability and will of the Church's priests, ministers and teachers to tackle the resulting problems at the anguishing counseling level where frustrated, confused, angry Christians express their anger.

There are no easy solutions. More men must opt for marriage, and, perhaps, we need a new count from Mother Nature.

Marshall Sr. They also have six grandchildren, Oreathia and Andrew Smith, Temetria Ishem, Robert, Leana and John Marshall Jr., and three foster children, Jennifer Potts, Tasha and Michael Payton.

At the renewal of the couple's vows, the matron of honor was Mrs. Mildred Wheat. The best man was John Marshall Sr., and the ring bearers were Leana Marshall and Andrew Smith. Rev. Walter S. Lacy was pastor. Presiding elder was Rev. J.K. Lacy, and bishop was Rt. Rev. Donald Ming.

audience, socializing until the three reached a settlement which eliminated the scheduled trial.

When the three involved parties entered the court room, County Prosecutor John L. Genin told Lipscomb that Ethridge had apologized for the disruption and any physical injuries that may have occurred. He added that Marrs and Welman agreed to drop all charges.

In a statement read before the judge, it was said, "Mr. Ethridge's apology is not an admission of criminal guilt and Mrs. Marrs' and Mr. Welman's dismissal is in no way to be taken that they could not prove the charges as filed."

The statement concluded, "They do this in sincere hope and trust this will go in some measure toward healing the divisiveness in the community."

Lipscomb gave a brief statement to the three parties commending their ability to reach an agreement.

He added, "We all need to work together, whether we want to or not, to reach a goal so we can keep Bay St. Louis the way we want it to be. I think you are doing the best thing for the town."

Ethridge is the owner of Struthers Industries Inc. of Gulfport and is an opponent of beachfront dockside gambling. Welman is chairman of Hancock County Tourism and Gaming Association. Marrs is also a member of the association.

The incident was said to have taken place at the entrance to the city's council chambers. The room was reported filled to capacity as a report was being given by city consultant Jules Lagarde on a planned comprehensive gaming feasibility study.

Welman and Marrs claimed Ethridge walked in and grabbed Welman, who was standing by the doorway, throwing him bodily backwards over a trash container.

Ethridge was then said to grab Marrs by the arm, shoving her against a window.

At the time of the incident, Ethridge implied that "coercive tactics" were being used to "intimidate citizens."

The settlement statement included an agreement by all parties to end this "matter" and to comment no further on the incident.

Redistrict

"The inequity is the one-vote, one-person theory," said Tate. Other districts in the state have lost thousands of voters to population shifts.

Tate's district was recarved by the current Legislature to include most of Jackson County, which she felt was unfair to people residing there. "I would be honored to represent that area, but I think they deserve someone from their area. In my case, they took a good district and ruined it."

The idea echoed by the courts was to "keep like kinds together," which Tate feels was not the case in the plan accepted by the legislators in April.

District 93, which was drawn out of north Hancock and Pearl River counties, no longer exists. The candidates who qualified to run in that district have until August 12, to qualify in their existing districts.

Carroll Rhodes, an attorney representing nine blacks who sued to force creation of more black-majority districts, did not rule out an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court to appeal Friday's decision to continue with the election as planned.

Gamble

Buckhurst said the downtown/end of Main Street site is much more constrained by existing buildings than other possible sites are.

He re-stated the qualities he had found in the city — its quaintness and appeal to those interested in antiques and historic sites, village atmosphere, views of the water, small scale — and said one hope of the city and the consultants is "that any future gaming sites can respond to these qualities."

VISITATION AND REVENUES

Stern looked at gambling feasibility from the other side of the coin — visitation and revenues forecasts.

He said he had based his forecasts on two scenarios: one based on the impact of gambling in Louisiana and those Mississippi counties where it is legal, and one based on the possible legalization of gambling in Harrison County, along with the advent of gambling where it already is legal.

Within both scenarios, Stern explained, there are three market segments: resident, visitor and induced. The resident market includes those people who will come to Bay St. Louis from up to 300 miles away. The tourist market is those who will visit from further distances; and the induced market includes those people who will come to the city specifically for the gambling.

Under the first scenario (no legal gambling in Harrison County), an estimated 1,533 gambling visitors may come from the resident market, while 568,000 more will be from the tourist market and about 600,000 from the induced market. Stern said the total visitation will be about 2.7 million a year, or $94 million a year in revenues.

Under the second scenario, Stern forecasted a total of about 967,000 visits a year, or about $23 million in revenues.

He said, "It seems to us that this is the more probable scenario. It is very likely that Harrison County will vote in dockside gambling, if not soon then somewhere down the line."

Even with the reduced numbers forecast with the legalization of gambling across the bay, Stern said dockside gambling does seem feasible in the city of Bay St. Louis.

He added that these revenue figures reflected only what would be spent by visitors on gambling, presuming there would be three sites in the county, and not what would be spent on meals, accommodations and shopping.

THE GROUPS' FINDINGS

The seven groups spent the next hour and 15 minutes discussing 10 questions about number and location of gambling sites, design and character of the sites; and other general planning issues.

While they discussed and wrote their answers, audience members also filled out copies of the questionnaires. Some people left the workshop, while others stepped outside the building to stretch their legs or smoke.

Other people spoke with the consultants, asking questions about such concerns as the impact of more visitors to the city on the Hancock Medical Center emergency room.

At the end of the discussion period, the groups' spokespersons presented their reports. Consensus was high among the seven groups on such issues as parking, traffic flow, preservation of the community's character, minimizing environmental impact from dredging and waste disposal, keeping the integrity of the city's infrastructure and providing adequate service, emergency evacuation, and protection for the city if the gambling operations go out of business.

Most of the groups agreed that there should be no more than three sites in the city limits, and that the sites should be scattered rather than concentrated in one area. There was also consensus that the vessels' gaming areas should be limited to adults, while family-oriented activities should be on other parts of the vessels or based on land.

Restaurants, hotels, recreational activities and shopping ranked highly among other facilities the groups thought should be provided at dockside gambling sites. The need for offsite parking and shuttle service was stressed in all seven presentations.

In discussing current and potential tourist attractions, places listed included: Stennis Space Center, Buccaneer and McLeod parks, the downtown Bay St. Louis area, the beaches, the railroad depot and a salt marsh off Felicity Street.

Opinions about how the downtown stores and city businesses can benefit from gambling sites ranged from no benefit to limited (from marketing and such advertising to much benefit from the city and cash flow.

Some noted additional things to look to the existing through state law and gaming commission regulation included: controlling operation hours and security and enforcement for existing zoning.

maintaining the character of the city, checking back against of gambling operation employment and stockholders; ensuring that a percentage of the operation profit go to the city; that a percentage of the city's total budget go for community promotion; and that local people are hired; limiting advertising taxes so those in low income areas aren't taxed out of the community they grew up in, a Robert Kane said.

guaranteeing vessel mobility in case of emergency evacuations; requiring that gambling operators pay taxes; protecting the strength of existing contributing paybacks to the city, from machine and from regulating signage.

The city officials linked the visitation and cash flow plan to public the report and then work on a booklet for the city government.

Randolph art showing opens at Serenity

"Synchronicity" is the title of the show for artist Brenda Randolph opening at Serenity Gallery's Sunday tea and reception for the artist from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 11.

According to Serenity owner Jerry Dixon, the observer becomes intrigued with her ingenious bringing together of incongruous elements into one painting. "She synchronizes them so beautifully that one becomes mesmerized in thinking that these shapes, forms, figures and colors are perfectly natural and harmonious together. She does it well," said Dixon.

"The maze within Serenity embraces the show exquisitely. The observer wants to move slowly among these paintings. There is no hurry. A structure of silence is within the paintings which evokes deep thought and communication without words," said Dixon.

Musician Jim Ballard will entertain at the reception.

said. "We started second-lining in the lobby, and the convention people loved it. Other people at the hotel thought what we were doing looked like so much fun they wanted to join the parties, but they couldn't since they weren't attending the convention."

Pam said of her second-line music, "It was something I never would have dreamed of taking anywhere else."

John complimented Pam: "She can play Professor Longhair better than Professor Longhair can. She plays all the music you hear around Mardi Gras, and does a great job of it."

Other bits of home that travelled to Vegas with the trio included a St. Stanislaus band stand (Catie Choina had loaned the group when she played drums with them, a sign made especially for the trip by Bay Catholic Elementary principal Ann Allen (who designed the cover art for the group's two albums), and a guitar stand John took with him and left there.

He said, "It's still up there, probably being used by the famous people now."

Connie's performances weren't limited to the group. By way of a model no-show, she ended up modeling a gypsy fairy costume that was designed to be used in an opera.

"The girl before me in the showcase was wearing this gorgeous thing made with peacock feathers, and the one behind me had on an Indian costume full of crystals and feathers."

"I was so scared. The one behind me said, 'Don't be nervous. I'll help you. I'm a runway model.' That really made me nervous."

Once Connie had a ton yards of red and pink fabric, a headdress that had to be at least two feet high and buttily wings — hit the stage. Her main concern was making sure the headdress didn't topple.

"It was like something out of Lucille Ball, you know? Here I was, trying to balance this thing and walk around on the stage, and the whole time I'm thinking, 'Oh, God, please don't let this fall off my head. I'll really be in trouble then!'"

"But let me tell you something. They have these big-screen monitors on both sides of the stage, and when I turned and saw myself on the monitors, I couldn't get my eyes unglued from them."

"I had not seen myself in the whole costume before I went on stage. So I just kept turning and turning, looking at those butterfly wings on the monitors. 'We were allowed 2 1/2 minutes on stage. I stayed out there three minutes and 25 seconds.'"

Pam said watching Connie in the showcase was "a kick," and John commented that he thought she looked like "she was on roller skates, moving real slow."

John said that for him, the highlights of the convention were playing his original music and "walking around the Sahara lobby in a tuxedo, having the visitors look at you like you're really a star."

"I think the only thing that would top it would be if George Bush called and said, 'Hey, do you think you could do a little entertaining for us here at the White House?' That would be the only thing I can think of that would beat this."

John said the trip enabled him to expand his horizons, play music he normally doesn't perform and increase his guitar capabilities.

The trip turned out to be a family vacation for the group, since their spouses took their equipment to the hotel. Connie said, "They were our roadies."

Now that the group is back in Hancock County, their main goals are to rest and get back to their main careers. John is a project manager for Spartan Building Company in New Orleans, while Pam teaches sixth grade and Connie teaches kindergarten at Bay Catholic Elementary.

Waveland Improvement Project to meet Monday at library

BY JACQUI COCHRAN

The Waveland Improvement Project group will meet 6 p.m. Monday at the Waveland Library on Coleman Avenue and invites the public to attend.

Guest speaker will be Barbara Cropp, director of the Chapter I Program for the Bay-Waveland School District.

Cropp plans to discuss with the community group the various ways in which parents might help their children to improve in school studies.

The Chapter I program stresses parental involvement, Cropp explained, and at this meeting her intentions are to hold an open discussion with the group as to what they see as the problems and possible solutions.

"We need establish some community networking," Cropp added.

Cropp had been approached by group member Clarence Harris, who expressed an interest in bringing a reading tutoring program into the Waveland area. The Waveland Improvement Project group is involved in various community help projects, such as a recent house painted for a couple. The home owner provided the paint and the group provided the labor.

Cropp said both Bay Middle School and North Bay Elementary have parental support groups involved with their Chapter I Programs and see this interest as a move to establish an active involvement with in the Waveland area.
